

CORPORATE SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY: GLOBAL OPPORTUNITIES

November 14 – 16, 2008
Johann Wolfgang Goethe-University
Frankfurt am Main, Germany

This symposium focuses on the growing interconnectedness of cultural diplomacy and corporate social responsibility through discussions of socially responsible investing, supply chain management, collective and individual rights, and the newest “fourth sector” initiative.

Through a number of workshops candidates will work collaboratively on a real-world project, the results of which will be presented for the conference attendees. If a particularly strong project is presented, participants may have the opportunity to see their project implemented as part of the ICD’s 2009 program offerings.

Highlights include:

- Panel Discussion featuring industry leaders from KPMG and Deutsche Bank as well as academic experts, including renowned Professor Dr. Schmidt, Chair of International Banking and Finance, University of Frankfurt.
- Unparalleled Networking Opportunities to meet with other young leaders from around the world
- Career Fair featuring companies from throughout Europe
- Global Village Party with food and drinks from various countries
- Gala Evening

About the Institute for Cultural Diplomacy:

The ICD is an independent, not-for-profit, non-governmental organization working to improve intercultural relations through conducting research and developing programs for young leaders.

Our organization has seen unprecedented growth over the past year. If you have participated in the International Symposium, Cultural Diplomacy in Africa or one of our Young Leaders Forums, we would like to thank you for helping us put cultural diplomacy at the forefront of today’s discussions. As a pioneer and leader in field of Cultural Diplomacy, the ICD hopes to continue this growth and to encourage dialogue, understanding and trust around the globe.
